

Jezebel Aloysius

International Students
Representative

Born and lived 18 years of my life in Malaysia. I come from a country with 3 major races all living under the same roof. My name is Jezebel Ramona Aloysius. Studying my first year in De Montfort University Leicester doing Forensic Science. I love all things small as even the smallest may inspire you in many ways. Coming from a country where you need to have team work because of the many cultures and races, I have learned to communicate and work alongside them and have been doing so as part of a routine in everyday life. As an international student, when I came over to England it was a major change for me. I have been to places for holidays but this has been the first time I've moved away from home, family, friends and many more.

To be honest, the first week of university was actually hard. I had to do everything on my own when back at home, everything else was done by my family being the last of four siblings. Also, I'm not used to both the weather and the food here which made me take a bit more time to adjust. By the end of two weeks getting into university I've learned that nothing is impossible and being brave and courageous will be your only way out. It was better than what I've expected, making new friends, trying new food, etc. All it takes is an open mind and just go with the flow. Therefore, I would like to represent the international students because I think I understand exactly where they're coming from and would like to help so many others in one way or another! ☺
